For once, the designers are doing us a turn in being a season ahead.

I like the new coats. They make even clothes-weary mannequins look young, almost spirited, like schoolgirls. In fact, the main silhouette is fust about what we did wear at school; high bodices, neat trunedback collars (round or lapelled), straight skirts, "give her plenty of room to move about" cuts that, standing slightly off from the figure, make you look slim.

Great wads of bunched fur (which have always been part of my dread of winter), making the neck look short or not there at all, are right out. Instead, the fur goes to make waistcoats, that fit over the coat, sleeves, flat collars and cuffs, or even jabot front-bowed or draped. Inevitably some silver fox, but more short-haired furs, goat, Alaska seal, ponyskin. –

The tunic line, which you'll wear if you're very slim, is the same in long conts as in suits and dresses: squared shoulders, six inches of waisting from under the armhole to high waist, then a squaring of the hip-line, so that the skirt section falls straight and full.

If the body of the coat is plain, their there is something about the sleeves...Some have a round fulness just below the natural shoulder line.

Excursion Trip To A Negro Heaven

Father Divine Leads His Flock In "Arks" To The Promised Land

SIMPLE JOYS HARLEM'S CREED

This is the story of one of the most amazing pilgrimages of recent years. It is told just as it happened. B_{H} C.V.R. THOMPSON

New York, Sept. 12. NOT a hundred miles from New York's Harlem is a thousand-acre farm, at first glance just like any other

But thousands of America's negroes—cooks, servants, butlers, bottle-washers, porters, lift-operators—think the brownish-greenish pastures of that farm are the Kingdom of Heaven.

Divine, odd-jobman from down south, who, "born' all over again, announced he was God, and then decided he was "Dean of the Universe," is the proprietor of Heaven, purchased by thousands of dollars contributed to his peace missions.

There, in Kingston, New York, he is building "mansions"—in negro eyes, anyway-to receive those negroes who are good enough to enjoy heaven upon carth.

Father Divine, who has been holding out the promised land to his flock for a long time, decided to hold his first pilgrimage.

At 3 n.m., Harlem was told every night-club, every store, every house, to begin to foregather.

So, in a frenzy of honest but hysterical faith, we form into a procession. Every one has a banjo, ukulele, or guitar, and they're playing spirituals and hymns on these instruments of jazz.

They begin stamping in the streets, waving banners, and shouting, "Peace, peace. Father Divine is God," until dawn.

By that time we are on the waterfront. Four negro ticket-sellers hop about the pier crying:-

"Peace, peace," and "Buy your tickets, ride by the Father's side to the promised land. One dollar a ticket."

Two "arks" are moored to the dock. They are really two old paddle steamers, but Father Divine prefers to call them arks.

Lorry loads of water melons, cases of soda pop, huge baskets of chicken are stowed aboard.

ABOUT THE "ARKS"

At six o'clock there is a hush among the crowd. Father Divine is "Here comes the body," chants the crowd. "Peace, brother, peace, peace. Peace is wonderful. Here comes the body."

Father Divine, swarthy, wellfed, bald and beaming, gets out of his taxi-cab, and walks towards his "arks" with his bodyguard, including his "white angel," whom they call Sister Fair Angel.

We pile on board the "arks." We have a chance to sudy this strange gospeller, Father Divine, as he stands in a light grey suit, with honey-coloured tie and a fivedollar gold piece fashioned into a TRISTAN DA CUNHA, loneliest outpost of the British Empire which is reported to be harassed by a rat plague, is to be relieved by Mr. Adrian Seligman, who is beginning a world-voyage in his barquentine Cap Pilar this month.

The island, 1,500 miles south-west of Capetown, is rarely visited by a ship more than once a year, and even then arrangements have to be made to send liners off their courses to take provisions or relieve the missionary.

"WILL BE ANY DAY NOW"

Hollywood, Sept. 10. PONALD COLMAN, famous screen lover, supposedly Hollywood's No. 1 woman-hater, has astonished the film colony by announcing that he will wed "any day

But who his bride will be he is keeping a close secret. Rumour is now busy linking his name with several women. Ruth Chatterton has been one of Colman's nearest friends. And at the moment Ruth is not married. But a name most coupled with his is that of Elizabeth,

With that happy smile which is well known on the screen, he says: "I want to marry and have children. It may happen any day now." .

Hollywood, Sept. 15. Charlie Chaplin is to direct a film called "Regency," based on the English novel by D. L. Murray. His flancee, Miss Paulette Goddard, will take the leading part.

Mr. Chaplin says that he will direct and produce the film. but not act in it himself. Production will begin when Paulette Goddard's first solo picture, known as "Production No. Six," is completed. By buying a scenario in England Mr. Chaplin is setting a precedent for himself, as his invariable custom has been to write his own scripts, or, in earlier days, just to make them up as he went along. Mr. Chaplin, in an interview, showed that he is maintaining his reputation as a philosopher. "A few years ago everyone went ligging on the floors of night clubs, with a vacuous look on their faces," he declared. "That has been supplanted by an expression of serious endeavour. "There is more sobriety, more naturalness," more simplicity and maturity. And the young people—they are well alive to the situation.

"This is a much more serious generation than the last one. Children know they face a harder future than their parents did."—Reuter.

Inspector M. H. Hourihan and Detective-Sergeant Riddell were present for the Police. Dr. R. S. Begbie, medical officer of the Victoria Mortuary, said that! on August 3 at 9.30 a.m. he examined deceased's body and found a small quantity of earth round her mouth and nostrils. Her face and lips were blue. There were brulses and superficial abrasions on the right and left cheeks and forehead a bruise behind the outer end of the right collar bone, and also brukes in front and on the left side of the abdomen. There were cuts on both

She did not see her mother again, until she heard the shed collapsing and hurried there to see her mother buried under the debris. With the aid of other coolies, her mother was taken out and found to have died.

Cheung Cham, foreman of the coolies working at the site, said that he was told of the accident by his fokis, and with their help removed the body from the wood and sand which was on top of her. Leung Chee, coolie, said he was coming out of the when he saw deceased. He warned her not to go in, a quantity of mud which was on a ledge directly above the shed seemed to be in a precarious position. She did not heed his warning and went in. After walking about 20 feet from the hut, he heard a rumbling sound, turned, and saw that the shed had collapsed owing to the mud above falling on it. He rushed to the scene, and with the help of many workmen extricated the body of the deceased. The jury returned a verdict of death through misadventure.

TRAFFIC ACCIDENT CAUSES

In the belief that remedies for traffic accidents will be more likely to be found when the eauses of such accidents have been ascertained, the British Ministry of Health recently carried out a most thorough analyof 6.289 road mishaps. involving the death of 6,477 persons. This inquiry followed the lines of a similar investigation in 1933, and it is now intended to embark on a census of all accidents, fatal or otherwise, as it is thought that an elucidation-of-how, when and why accidents occur must ultimately lead to their reduction. Here in Hongkong, weekly returns of all traffic mishaps—are issued; and the thought occurs that these might be made the basis of a careful annual analysis, with the same objects in view. Meanit is of interest to look into the British figures, as it may easily-be that the facts revealed are, in large measure, similar to those which a local investigation would disclose. It is shown that over sixty per cent. of the accidents under review happened on straight roads or on bends with sight lines; sixty per cent. occurred in light traffic; sixty per cent. happened in "built-up" areas, where the maximum speed allowed is 30 miles an hour. Bret Harte's Birthday Makes Me Long For-

Harte's birth, which fell last month—he was born on August 25, 1839—reminds us that modern poets have lost the knneks of writing poems for the people. They have lost heart, and they have lost their hearts.

It would, perhaps, have been a miracle if the post-war years of disillusionment and intellectual sterility had produced another poet like Bret Harte, who wrote when adventure was gay and careless and, apparently, limitless. The modern poet is all concerned with himself, and he considers himself imprisoned. Through the bars he grasps at savagery. He cannot sing, but groans to the beating of a tomtom. Sex makes him writhe: he is obsessed by it and is un-

Possibly the air is our salvation, rather than our damnation by bombs. In the air there is still adventure, a sense of freedom and romance. May we not be due for a twentieth century Bret Harte who will catch our popular fancy with—

"I reside at Croydon Airdrome. and my name is Musing Mike; I'm a pretty good mechanic, and I ride a motor-bike."

Do you remember the original Truthful James who lived at Table Mountain? He was the reciter of plain language, and he wished to remark that for ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain the heathen Chinee is peculiar.

That was a phrase which will live long. The people grabbed it, just as they grabbed Kipling's assertion that the Colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady were sisters

Harte got his material and his knowledge of real men, women and children from the roaring, mining days of California, where he went in 1854. Those people and all others saw real types in his verse. He touched their hearts, and made epic lingles about homely heroes. Take this about the miner, Flynn of Virginia:-

Back to the wall, He held the timbers " Ready to fall; Then in the darkness I heard him call: "Run for your life, Jakel

He was tried for having written immoral and seditious songs: he was imprisoned for his satire on the medlevally gorgeous coronation of Charles X, but France took him to her bosom, and Louis XVIII -said,-" One-cannot-help-forgiving the authors of the King of Yvetot a good deal."

AGREEMENT FOR CARRIAGE OF AIR MAIL

A REGULAR air mail service between Manila and San Francisco, via Guam, Midway Island, Wake Island and Honolulu, will commence on October 21.

This information was exclusively published by the "Telegraph" yesterday afternoon.

Before the end of the year, Hongkong will be linked up with this service-operated by Pan American Airways -by a feeder air line operating from Kai Tak airport.

Negotiations for the carriage of air mail between Hongkong and Manila have, the "Telegraph" understands, already been concluded, and an Agreement is now en route to London for final approval by the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

This Agreement, it is understood, covers postage rates, fees, etc., for the carriage of mail between Hong-kong and Manila and onwards, and also the transference of air mail to Chinese internal services.

China Link By C. N. A. C.

It is almost certain that the internal link will be provided by Chinese National Airways Corpora-tion, which has already been informed by the Hongkong Government that there are no longer any objections to C.N.A.C. machines landing regularly at Kal Tak.

Pan American Airways are, financially interested in the Chinese Corporation, which operates services linking up practically whole of China.

Thousands of persons gathered to witness the ceremony that terminated the land dispute which is more than 75 years old.

The land claiming celebration, sponsored by the Breckenridge Women's club, gained national attention and thousands of visitors packed the little mountain town to attend the ceremonies.

The tract of land dld not belong to the United States previously because it never was included in any purchase or treaty. It contains such thriving towns as Breckenridge, Hot Sulphur Springs, Kremmling and the resort town of Grand Lake.

The Lousiana Purchase, in 1803, included all lands drained by the Missouri and Mississippi rivers while the Texas Territory annexed in 1845 included a strip of land extending into what is now bounded on the east by "the highest mountains." NOW HONGKONG CAN HAVE BEST OF EVERYTHING

The discovery of a hairy Siberian mammoth trapped in prehistoric ice-muck five hundred centuries ago is responsible for an innovation that will shortly bring fresh food direct from the farms of sunny California to your table in Hongkong.

A fifty-seven-year-old Californjan fruit-grower and chemist A. B. What's In A Name?

QUT what those English newspaper men did those Chinese names! The footballers must have got a big chuckle out of it. The News-Chronicle finished up by describing Wong Ki-leung as Ke-leang Fung! Chua Boon-hay (the best Chinese back on view says Frank Thorogood) is termed Boon-lay Chua. More amazing is the mess they made of poor Leung Wing-chul: He went Into print some 1,700,000 times as Wang-Chul-Leung. There is also a smart little Chinese right-winger known as Young Shul-yick. But you wouldn't think so if you saw his name in the English press. They more or less agreed on calling him Shue Yich Young, and that's about the nearest they got! And I wonder what Tam Kong-pak said (or even thought) when he observed that his new angitelsed name was Keong-Peck-Tum? As will be quickly observed, the chief error was the placing of the surname after the christened names. Curiously enough I don't think the English scribes were entirely to blame for this. According to the official note-head of the Chinese Olympic football squad, which set out all the names of the players, their surnames were given last, instead of first as is the correct procedure. And as we all know, when it comes to phonetically transcribing Chinese names into English, anything may happen. I must get the office boy to remind me when Mr. Wong Ka-tsun comes back to ask him why they made that mistake on the noteheads!

We And the Chinese have once again fairly dominated the competitions, and this dominance has become u more or less accepted order of things. In the course of one's perambulations about the club courts one runs across players who stoutly assert that "if only we had had a bit of luck" we should have beaten the Chinese. One might be inclined to believe this if one wasn't quite satisfied that the reason for these defeats is something entifely different. It can be traced shack to an attitude towards the game. "He's out and will never rooms at a modest hotel thronged (but not necessarily the best team) and the desperate fight for league points or cup honours, has taken precedence over the mere provision of good, entertaining football. The spectacle of football to-day is largely dependent on the personal appearance of such highly-paid men as Alex James, Drake, Hulme, Dr. Marshall, Brooks, Toseland, Meikle, and others. Their names, as much as their prowess, have monetary value to clubs, and it is to this that clubs are apt to pander, Perhaps Mr. Carruthers has inferred a pessismism which is not entirely justified regarding the altered standard of first class football. For example I saw, a first-class match in England last season which was the cpitome of everything that was classical in football. But, it is sad to relate, that this was perhaps an exception rather than the rule. The same feeling of consternation is reflected in the sayings and writings of some of football's leading legislators. They foresee, unless there are radical changes in methods and tactics, the continued decline of English football. The recent defeats of English profes-slonal teams on the Continent have created the argument as to whether their cause was the result of a decline in English football or a corresponding improvement in the Continentals. Possibly it is 50-50. But the general fear at Home seems to be that unless clubs are prepared to change their teetbods and insist upon their players. methods and insist upon their players developing the more academic feaures of the game, in substitution to the present speed, and more speed ruling, then English football will continue on the down-grade.

It is interesting to note that this shield has now been won by every team participating in the league. Only whisky that has matured for long years in the wood is used in the blending of Johnnie Walker; and thanks to the huge stocks of whiskies which have been laid down throughout the years, Johnnie Walker is older and better than ever.

All over. Scotland these fine whiskies are patiently maturing, waiting to give, when skilfully blended, that "roundness" and harmony which has always been a distinctive feature of Johnnie Walker. Remember to look for the famous square bottle; remember to ask for Johnnie Walker by name.

MAGIC HANDS MALINI ENTERTAINS ROTARIANS

Slim hands, in appearance more those of a woman than of a man, yet hands which are surprisingly well developed and muscular, were the centre of attraction for members of the Rotary Club who at-tended the weekly tiffle at the Hongkong Hotel yesterday. The hands were those of Max Molini, the magician.

"I bring a greeting to the Hong-kong Rotary Club," said the visitor, "from my own and the neighbour-ing clubs in New Zealand, I wish to draw your attention to the fact, too, that next March we are holding a conference of Rotarians in Wellington and I am authorised to invite to that conference all Hong-kong members of Rotary who care to attend.

"Rotary," continued the speaker, "is a mission, but I am sure that this morning when the first dense, all Rotorians do not know how fog of the Autumn threw a chill great that mission is. "We in New Zealand realise that the coming century will be one when the Pacific will be the centre of the globe; but it is also going to be a century of peace, goodwill, friendship and understanding."

Many Visitors

Mr. Tam then, welcomed, back a local member of Rotary, Dr. G. A. C. Herklotts and proceeded to introduce the visitors. These included a number of local and overseas people: Messrs, A. Drummond Murray and F. W. Bertie of London, Dr. N. Bercovitz of Hoihow, Dr. M. Nicolson and Mr. V. Hugo of Hongkong, Messrs, C. R. W. Thomson of Swatow, G. A. Pentreath, I. Mantel, Captain J. W. Waller, Pay-Commander F. J. Lloyd, Messrs, I. P. Tamworth and H. K. Armstrong, of Hongkong, Erling Bache, Captain Fabricius and M. Henrik Neilson of Conenhagen, Surg,-Commdr. May of Copenhagen, Surg.-Commdr. May of the R.N. Hospital, Messrs. J. An-derson Miller and M. Ching of Hongkong, N. A. Gorman of Canton, and Mr. Max Malini, of Chi-

Introducing the speaker for the day, Mr. Tam pointed out that Mr. Malini was world famous, had travelled the globe in the "show" business for over 50 years and had, during that time, performed before some of the most illustrious personages of his time-besides many hundreds of Rotorians.

Mr. Max Malini then proceeded to keep the Rotary members and their guests amused. He started his entertainment by relating several_stories_which_gained_consider_ ably in the telling.

His success, said Malini, was due mainly to his sticking to his own business. Once, having lost all his money on horse racing in Australia he went to New Zealand and there performed before a distinguished Knight who was illustrious.

as a speaker. "Finally I asked if this person would not say a few words in order that I might put it on record that I had heard him speak, for I had heard many other famous speakers. He agreed, came up to me and said, 'Malini, you should be the premier of Palestine. The whole of Palestine should be yours!' But I had only one answer for him—"How do you know I am a Jew?" (Laughter).

The Lions' Club

On another occasion, Malini related, he was speaking before a Lions' Club and told the story of a lion. A circus owner, he said, had lost his lion and finally prevailed upon a Jew to dress in a lion's skin and to act as a lion. The Jew agreed, for $25 and went into the cage. The ringmaster called upon his patrons to come up and see the fiercest lion in captivity. He even went so far as to offer, in order to show the lion's strength, to put it between the tiger and the leopard in the same cage.

At this there were squeaks of disapproval from under the lion's skin, which was nevertheless hustled into the cage containing the tiger and leopard. The Jew began to pray heartily. "Please God protect me, I am a Jew." But the only reply he received was the hoarse whisper from either side of him. "Shut-up! So are we!" "Shut-up! So are wel"

Even more entertaining than his stories, however, was Malini's de-monstrations of his skill with a "deck" of cards.

He performed but few tricks, yet was perfect and left every member of the nudience completely baffled. He allowed one member. for instance, to choose a card-not by touching the pack but merely by thinking of it. He then allowed another member to deal the cards one at a time into his hands while still another member was instructed to call a halt whenever he chose to do so. After the third card the member said stop! And the card he had stopped at was the card chosen by the original mem-

CINEMA NOTES

"While Parents Sleep," the new success of that name, which is ntthe King's Theatre to-day, centres round the amatory difficulties of two brothers, one, Henry, a frivolous young naval officer, played by Mackenzie Ward, and the other Neville, a priggish Army man, played by Romilly Lunge. With his polished performance, Lunge provides a perfect foll to the merry antics of Mackenzie Ward, and, incidentally, establishes his reputation as one of most promising young actors. The quick-fire comedy that ensues from the frequent clashes of these two temperaments is a joy to behold and hear. Polo is one of Neville's transacted. ANTHOLOGY OF MODERN BIOGRAPHY Edited by Lord David Cecil (Nelson, 3s, 6d.)

HIS volume, one of a serles of modern anthologles issued by Thomas Nelson and Sons, proved a refreshing change from much reading of novels. That, at least, was the emotional impression: and it was confirmed, to one's intellectual satisfaction, by Lord David Ceell's introductory assertion that "Biography is not an important form of literary art.

"But ... It is the only new Form." Our creative literary artists, apparently, are chilled by the scientific apirit of the age. Their enthusiastic conotions and exuberant fancies-the life-blood of poetry, for example-are checked. Thus, says Lord David, the modern writer often turns to biography no that he may give an artistic form to actence.

There is also to be taken into account great progress in the study of psychology: "The nature of human personality and the forces that actuate it. the influence of heredity and environment, are understood as never before. So that writers are able, as never before, to give a full account of human character." Mr. Lytton Strachey, then, heads the modern array which is allied with the past achievements of Carlyle and Macaulay: and, of course, we have Mr. Strachey here represented by an extract from "Queen Victoria," and from "Emluent Victorians"

Mr. Hilaire Belioc, concerned here with the death of Danton, marches by, always on a hill-top, always in a high wind, surrounded by his own magnificent bodyguard of words.

There are fourteen others, including Harold Nicolson on Byron, Philip Guedalla on Wellington, André Maurois on Disraell, John Buchan on the trial of Charles I and A. J. A. Symons on Stonley, the man who said,

"Dr. Livingstone, I presume." Taken all together, in this form, they appear as the authors of a fascinating little historical revue; and the sketches, very properly, tempt one to seek the complete pictures from which they have been lifted.

There is this to be added on behalf of the modern biographers-they do not mummify; they resurrect with art. which may account for some slight surprise on the faces of their subjects; on Byron's, for instance, when hearing himself summoned by Harold Nicolson as an "irresolute and dyspeptic little

One of the "Ten Africans," Chief Ndansi Kumalo, played Lobengula in the film, "Rhodes of Africa."

AFRICANA

TEN AFRICANS edited by Margery Perham-(Faber and Faber, with 16 illustrations, 15s. nct.) NPREJUDICED people who have lived in remote African settlements will tell you that it is characteristic of most natives to giggle foolishly when addressed. It is actually a self-protective custom, and is belied by the penetrating way in which they will summarise the character of a white man after the Arst meeting, for the benefit of their friends.

Not knowing the Africans well, on occasion, as the editress of "Ten-Africans" says, "We may even make the unscientific remark that [they] are like animals

Any such inistake this book is magnificently calculated to correct. It contains the condensed blographies of ten African natives, six of them collected by unbiased observers, and four written down in English by the subjects themselves.

Of the ten Africans, eight are men. two are women. They come from such varied countries as Nigeria, Nyasaland, Natal: but all from lands south of the equator, under the rule of Britain and Its dominions.

Although it is first-class entertainment, the book can hardly fail in its purpose of teaching us something subout people whose future is largely in our hands. Here are some instances of the interest and charm it contains:

Chief Bwembya on the end of a fight in which his company was utterly defented: "The Baunga just stood and les us go. They were frightened of us, you see, because they know we were a very flerce people. Chief Ndansi Kumalo (who actually saw Rhodes, and came to England to act in the film about him): "With your weapons you shoot from far, far away, and do not know whom you are killing; that is unmanly." Gilbert Coka, a ploneer of African Unionism, tells a bitter story. For instance, when he worked in a hospital:---"'Don't speak English to me,' said one of the [white] sisters in Zulu, when I tried to do my work. The whites with whom we shared this job were paid eight times what we . If the clear purity of the style of this book arises from thinking in Bantu languages, by all means let us put Peter Peroxide Ivide "The Showman "Jand others out to nasture with the Africans for a term of yearst

Choose a Bright Morning, by Hillel Bernstein (Gollanez, 6s.). Once Your Enemy, by Heinrich Hauser (Methuen, 10s. 6d.). The Trouble I've Seen, by Martha Gellhorn (Putnam, 7s. 6d.).

ERE are three books that are as topical as your morning newspaper. They all have to do from one angle or another with dictatorship, that dreadful compulsory drill in which a number of self-appointed sergeant-majors are taking advantage of men's inability to put two and two together to make them form

Choose a Bright Morning is a deliriously joyous satire at the expense of Hitlerism. All the strutting pompositles and solemn cruelties of Nazi Germany are parodied with an exquisite viciousness. Uncle Adolf is transformed into Aunt Sally in this laughter-making novel:

The author, though, takes care to re-mind us in one of his rare serious moments that laughter, however loud, will never shift the Hitlers of this world; they have no sense of humour. Heinrich Hauser in Once Your Enemy gives a picture of post-war Germany as a breeding-ground for dictators. His book is a record of an amazing number of violent experiences. The author left school in his early 'teens to become a naval cadet, but almost immediately became involved in the German civil war.

METER BLUSHES AS IT RECORDS LIQUOR BREATH

Syracuse, N. Y. Sept. 20. An "Alkameter" which "blushes", a rosy red when it encounters an alcohol breath is one of the latest inventions for detecting secret tipplers. Frank J. DeRewal, and Harry E. Spencer, inventors of the device say it is immune to cloves, mints, onlons or other "camouflages" and can sniff out the fumes of alcohol despite the culprit's ability to say rapidly and with perfect accuracy, "Simple Simon picked a peck of pickled peppers." The "Alkameter" is about 14 inches wide. At one end is a tube through which the suspect blows his breath and at the other a copper coil to which is attached a bottle of colourless liquid.

The colourless liquid is the secret of the invention. If the suspect has imbibed, the liquid turns a brilliant rosy red. If he is sincere in his protestations of innocence, the liquid remains colourless.

Police who tested the device admitted it worked but were insistent it did not tell "When is a man drunk?"

NEW AMBASSADOR INSPECTS GUARD

Seville Reports MADRID GROUND IN

Lisbon, Sept. 22.

Desperate fighting and a terrific bombardment by insurgent planes preceded the fall of Maqueda when three insurgent columns attacked at dawn yesterday.

The rebels moved in from the south, centre and north, but were held up by the Government's mechanised forces until insurgent planes bombed and destroyed the loyalists' positions.

The Government militia was demoralised by the bombardment, according to a correspondent of Diario de Noticias, and retreated in motor buses in the direction of Torrijos, pursued by the insurgents, with the Moorish battalions in the van. It is reported that thousands of militiamen were killed.

After the fall of Maqueda a terrific air battle is reported to have occurred between insurgent and Government planes, which arrived too late to help the defenders of the town.—Reuter.

Making Fresh Stand With the Loyalist Hendquarters on the Toledo-Maqueda Front, Sept.

Loyalists, retreating from villageto village, fell back to new defence lines in the face of a fenewed rebel drive, the advance units of the Government troops holding positions two and a half miles on the Madrid side of Maqueda. The widespread evacuation of the Maqueda-Santa Cruz-Torrijos angle indicates that this will be the no-man's-land of what must seemingly-be-the-greatest-battle-of-l

For once, the designers are doing us a turn in being a season ahead.

I like the new coats. They make even clothes-weary mannequins look young, almost spirited, like schoolgirls. In fact, the main silhouette is just about, what we did wear at school; high bodices, neat trunedback collars (round or lapelled), straight skirts, "give her plenty of room to move about" cuts that, standing slightly off from the figure, make you look slim.

Great wads of bunched fur (which have always been part of my dread of winter), making the neck look short or not there at all, are right out. Instead, the fur goes to make waistcoats, that fit over the coat, sleeves, flat collars and cuffs, or even jobot front-bowed or draped. If the body of the coat is plain, then there is something about the sleeves...Some have a round fulness just below the natural shoulder line.

Only steadfast rule is that there be over a dress, no decoration-panelling, fulness or other interest-in the back of coats

Fashion says. BLACK

ANY new colours and new materials are used in the dresses for the new season, but black is popular with almost every designer. Paris, at any rate, still regards a black dress as the smartest a well-dressed woman can

Black velvet is allied with cloth, with faille, with lace, with fur. Doing things by halves is a fashionable trick.

A slim-fitting evening dress of black cloth has an elongated triangular piece of black velvet inset down the front.

The whole of the back is black velvet, matching the cloak.
An evening dress is black velvet in front and black faille at the back, where the skirt, arranged in billowing lines, flows out to form a short train. Another dress, of black velvet and lace, shows the velvet in front, the lace being arranged in frills at the back. In a tailored suit, the coat, which is broadcloth at the back, is seal musquash in front. This arrangement is reversed on the short, narrow, tailored skirt.

Evening dresses have skirts slit at the sides, at the back in front or at intervals round the hem. Slitting is not confined to narrow, straight skirts, but appears also on models which are gored from the waist downwards.

Coats or capes are worn with most evening dresses. Shapes range from short Eton jackets to elegant, sweeping groundlength coats...

A black broadcloth Eton jacket has three-quarter length leg-of-mutton sleeves made from jet paillettes. The coat is bordered with jet. The dress of black broadcloth has jet "frogs" down each side of the slender, ground-length skirt.

Excursion Trip To A Negro Heaven

Father Divine Leads His Flock In "Arks" To The Promised Land

JOYS SIMPLE CREED HARLEM'S

This is the story of one of the most amazing pilgrimages of recent years. It is told just as it happened. By C.V.R. THOMPSON

New York, Sept. 12. NOT a hundred miles from New York's Harlem is a thousand-acre farm, at first glance just like any other

But thousands of 'America's negroes—cooks, servants, butlers, bottle-washers, porters, lift-operators-think the brownish-greenish pastures of that farm are the Kingdom

Father Divine, odd-jobman from dówn south, who, "born" .. all over again, announced he was God, and then decided he was "Dean of the Universe," is the proprietor of Heaven, purchased by thousands of dollars contributed to his peace missions.

There, in Kingston, New York, he is building "mansions"-in negro eyes, anyway-to receive those negroes who are good enough to enjoy heaven upon earth.

Father Divine, who has been holding out the promised land to his flock for a long time, decided to hold his first pilgrimage.

At 3 a.m., Harlem was told in every night-club, every store, every house, to begin to foregather.

So, in a frenzy of honest but hysterical faith, we form into a procession. Every one has a banjo, ukutele, or gultar, and they're playing spirituals and hymns on these instruments of jazz.

They begin stamping in the streets, waving banners, and shouting, "Peace, peace. Father Divine is God," until dawn.

By that time we are on the waterfront. Four negro ticket-sellers hop about the pler crying:-

"Peace, peace," and "Buy your tickets, ride by the Father's side to the promised land. One dollar a ticket."

Two "arks" are moored to the dock. They are really two old paddle steamers, but Father Divine prefers to call them arks.

Here's a face to match the sunny skies of summer, reflecting happy contentment and perfect health. Such is typical of the child whose parents rely upon Baby's Own Tablets to correct any health irregularity at the first sign, and thus keep the child in the best of condition all the year round.

For the usual ailments to which little children are subject, such as stomach upset, constipution, colic, colds and croup, feverishness, worms, there is no better remedy than Baby's Own Tablets, and they likewise are a corrective of diarrhoea by removing its cause, usually the presence of irritating matter in the intestinal tract.

At teething time, too, so often a period of pain and sleeplessness, the tablets are invaluable, as their mild laxative action seitles the stomach, > cases the pains, soothes the nerves, and promotes, health-giving sleep. TRAFFIC ACCIDENT CAUSES

In the belief that remedies for traffic accidents will be more to be found when the causes of such accidents have been ascertained, the British Ministry of Health recently carried out a most thorough analysis of 6,289 road mishaps, involving the death of 6,477 persons. This inquiry followed the lines of a similar investigation in 1933, and it is now intended to embark on a census of all accidents, fatal or otherwise, as it is thought that an elucidation of how, when and why accidents occur must ultimately lead to their reduction. Here in Hongkong, weekly returns of all traffic mishaps; are issued; and the thought occurs that these might be made the basis of a careful annual analysis, with the objects in view. Meanit is of interest to look into the British figures, as it may easily be that the facts revealed are, in large measure, similar to those which a local investigation would disclose. It is shown that over sixty per cent. of the accidents under review happened on straight roads or on bends with sight lines; sixty per cent. occurred in light traffic; sixty per cent. happened in "built-up" areas, where the maximum speed allowed is 30 miles an hour. Among the victims of these accidents nearly half the total forced on him to get him out of his were pedestrians. As was to be present rut; he hasn't got the guts day. Bret Harte's Birthday Makes Me Long For

HE anniversary of Harte's birth, which fell last month-he was born on August 25, 1839—reminds us that modern poets have lost the knacks of writing poems for the people. They have lost heart, and they have lost their hearts.

It would, perhaps, have been a miracle if the post-war years of dislilusionment and intellectual sterility had produced another poet like Bret Harte, who wrote when adventure was gay and careless and, apparently, limitless.

The modern poet is all concerned with himself, and he considers himself imprisoned. Through the bars he grasps at savagery. He cannot sing, but groans to the beating of a tomtom. Sex makes him writhe: he is obsessed by it and is un-

Do you remember the original Truthful James who lived at Table Mountain? He was the reciter of plain language, and he wished to remark that for ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain the heathen Chinee is peculiar.

That was a phrase which will live long. The people grabbed it, just as they grabbed Kipling's assertion that the Colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady were sisters

Simplicity and song are the secret of the people's poets. They knew the simple emotions that are eternal, and they could put them into easily remembered rhythmical

Harte got his material and his knowledge of real men, women and children from the roaring, mining days of California, where he went in 1854. Those people and all others saw real types in his verse. He touched their hearts, and made epic jingles about homely heroes. Take this about the miner, Flynn of Virginia:—

Thar in the drift, Back to the wall. He held the timbers Ready to fall; Then in the darkness

I heard him call: "Run for your life, Jakel Run for your wife's sakel Don't wait for me."

Yes, a jingle; but it comes very near to tears. It touches hearts and pride of comradeship. There are Flynns in every British colliery to-day.

OOD'S "Bridge of Sighs" was his greatest work. It was written shortly before he died, and Thackeray said that " he fell in the full blaze and fame of that great victory."

You may find yourself quoting it now without knowing:-"Alas for the rarity of Christian charity under the sun!" That is Hood. For me its perfect phrase is—" She stood, with amazement, homeless by night."

With amazement. This emotion is at the root of all social unrestnot resentment, not avarice, not class-hatred: just amazement at "man's inhumanity to man." And that quotation is from Burns. Robert Burns is still the voice of Scotland. Dying in 1796, at the age of thirty-seven, his life had been a hard, lusty, suffering, manly one: and his poems reflect his life. He was among the greatest poets of his time: all Scots will say he was the greatest. He heard Nature strike a chord and he sang-" John Anderson, my Jo . . . " " Green grow the rushes. O! The sweetest hours that e'er I

DE BERANGER, whose life overlapped that of Burns, was the singer, above all, of Republican France. The Revolution made a deep impression on him; and, living under a Republic, an Emperor, or a King, his satire was always pointed in defence of democracy. He was tried for having written immoral and seditious songs: he was imprisoned for his satire on the medievally gorgeous coronation of Charles X, but France took him to her bosom, and Louis XVIII said, "One cannot help forgiving the authors of the King of Yvetot a good deal."

This poem, a satire on the reign of Napoleon I, is best known to us in Thackeray's version. One

Hongkong-Manila Air Link Before End of Year: Pan-American To Provide Feeder Service

AGREEMENT FOR CARRIAGE OF AIR MAIL

A REGULAR air mail service between Manila and San Francisco, via Guam, Midway Island, Wake Island and Honolulu, will commence on October 21.

This information was exclusively published by the "Telegraph" yesterday afternoon.

Before the end of the year, Hongkong will be linked up with this service—operated by Pan American Airways—by a feeder air line operating from Kai Tak airport.

Negotiations for the carriage of air mail between Hongkong and Manila have, the "Telegraph" understands, already been concluded, and an Agreement is now en route to London for final approval by the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

It is almost certain that the internal link will be provided by Chinese National Alrways Corporation, which has already been informed by the Hongkong Government that there are no longer any objections to C.N.A.C. machines landing regularly at Kai Tak.

Pan American Airways are financially interested in the Chinese Corporation, which operates services linking up practically the whole of China.

What's In A Name?

DUT what those English newspaper men did those Chinese names! The footballers must have got a big chuckle out of it. The News-Chronicle finished up by describing Wong Ki-leung as Ke-leang Fung! Chua Boon-hay (the best Chinese back on view say: Frank Thorogood) termed Boon-lay Chua. More umazing is the mess they made of poor Leung Wing-chui. He went into print some 1,700,000 times as Wang-Chui-Leung. There is also a amart little Chinese right-winger known as Yeung Shui-yick. But you wouldn't think so if you saw his name in the Eaglish press. They more or less agreed on calling him Shup Yich Young, and that's about the nearest they got! And I wonder what Tam Kong-pak said (or even thought) when he observed that his new anglicised name was Keong-Peck-Tum? As will be quickly observed. the chief error was the placing of the sturiame after the christened names. Curiously enough I don't think the English scribes were entirely to blame for this. According to the official note-head of the Chinese Olympic Sootball squad, which set out all the names of the players, their surnames were given last, instead of first as is the correct procedure. And as we all know, when it comes to phonetically: dramscribing Chinese names into English, anything may happen, I | must get the office boy to remind me when Mr. Wong Ka-tsim comes back to ask him why they made that nilstake on the noteheads!

Colony League Tennis

LIONGKONG'S [cague tennis season is over. What has it taught us? Very little that is new, I fear. We and the Chinese have once again fairly dominated the competitions, and this dominance has become a more or less accepted order of things. in the course of one's perambulations about the club courts one runs across players who stoutly assert that "if only we had had a bit of luck" we should have beaten the Chinese. One might be inclined to believe this if one wasn't quite satisfied that the reason for these defeats is something entirely different. It can be traced back to an attitude towards the game. These Chinese like to take their tenniseriously. IS SHOWMANSHIP

English football is now in full swing. Each match day during the season the managers of the Lengue Clubs will awake with a single thought, "Can we win two points to-day?"

Points! Points! They dominate the game, and I fear the result may be injurious. Indeed those who trust their memory of 20 years ago declare that the public of to-day have a false conception of what football might be as a rhythmical, scientific exhibition of ball play.

side of football, which is bound up thians, though shooting badly at with the securance of the best players | various periods gave him lots of (but not necessarily the best team) and the desperate fight for league points or cup honours, has taken precedence over the mere provision of good, entertaining football. The spectacle of football to-day is largely dependent on the personal appearance of such highly-paid men as Alex James, Drake, Hulme, Dr. Marshall, Brooks, Toseland, Meikle, and others. Their names, as much as their prowess, have monetary value to clubs, and it is to this that clubs are apt to pander, Perhaps Mr. Carruthers has inferred a pessismism which is not entirely justified regarding the altered standard of first class football. For example I saw a first-class match in England last season which was the epitome of everything that was classical in football. But, it is said to relate, that this was perhaps an exception rather than the rule. The same feeling of consternation is reflected in the sayings and writings of some of football's leading legislators. They foresee, unless there are radical changes in methods and tactics, the continued decline of English football. The recent defeats of English profes-sional teams on the Continent have created the argument as to whether their cause was the result of a decline in English football or a corresponding improvement in the Continentals. Possibly it is 50-50. Only whisky that has matured for long years' in the wood is used in the blending of Johnnie Walker; and thanks to the huge stocks of whiskies which have been laid down throughout the years, Johnnie Walker is older and better than ever.

All over Scotland these fine whiskies are patiently maturing, waiting to give, when skilfully blended, that "roundness" and harmony which has always been a distinctive feature of Johnnie Walker. Remember to look for the famous square bottle; remember to ask for Johnnie Walker by name.

GLIDER RECORD

IMPORTANT TO LIVER SUFFERERS

By Dr. Quignon of the Faculty

Just now I am kept very busy by an epidemic of "liver" disorders—a great many people feeling "out of sorts." bilious, depressed and unable to enjoy their food. Undoubtedly the best remedy for an upset liver is provided by certain famous Continental Mineral Springs, but science has now made it possible for all liver sufferers to enjoy in their homes, all the benefits of Continental Spa treatment, at little cost. By reproducing in erystalline form the essential principles of seven world renowned Spas, including those at Vichy, Carlsbad, Aix-les-Bains and Marienbud, 'Alkla Saltrates' provides what is probably the finest liver tonic and corrective known. It is obtainable from all high class Dispensaries and Stores.

To men and women who are feeling liverish and "out of sorts", and to those who are suffering from Rheumatism, Lumbago, Kidney trouble and High Blood Pressure I can recommend 'Alkia Saltrates' with confidence and I advise them to start the treatment without delay.

ANTHOLOGY OF MODERN DIOGRAPHY Edited by Lord David Cecil (Nelson, 3s, 6d,)

-3 HIB volume, one of a series of modern anthologles issued by Thomas Nelson and Sons, proved a refreshing change from much reading of novels.

That, at least, was the emotional Impression: and it was confirmed. to one's intellectual satisfaction. by Lord David Cecil's introductory assortion that "Biography is not an important form of literary art. "But . . . it is the only new Form "

Our creative literary artists, apparently, are chilled by the scientific spirit of the age. Their enthusiastic emotions and exuberant fancies—the life-blood of poetry, for example-are checked. Thus, says Lord David; the modern writer often turns to biography so that he may give an artistic form to science.

There is also to be taken into account great progress in the study of psychology: "The nature of human personmity said the forces that actuate it. EUTHANASIA, AND OTHER ASPECTS the influence of heredity and environment, are understood as never before. So that writers are able, as never before, to give a full account of human character." Mr. Lytton Strachey, then, heads the modern array which is allied with the past achievements of Carlyle and Macaulay: and, of course, we have Mr. Strackey here represented by an extract from "Queen Victoria," and from

"Eminent Victoriana" . Mr. Hilaire Belloc, concerned here with the death of Danton, marches by, always on a hill-top, always in a high wind, surrounded by his own magnificent bodyguard of words.

Taken all together, in this form, they appear as the authors of a fascinating little historical revue; and the sketches, very properly, tempt one to seek the complete pictures from which they have been lifted.

There is this to be added on behalf of the modern blographers-they do not mummify; they resurrect with art, which may account for some slight surprise on the faces of their subjects; on Byron's, for instance, when hearing himself summoned by Harold Nicolson has an "irresolute and dyspeptic little

Uncle Adolf Becomes

Choose a Bright Morning, by Hillel Bernstein (Gollancz, 0s.). Once Your Enemy, by Heinrich Hauser (Methuch, 10s. 6d.). The Trouble I've Seen, by Martha Gellhorn (Putnum, 7s. 6d.).

TERE are three books that are as topical as your morn-ing newspaper. They all have to do from one angle or another with dictatorship, that dreadful compulsory drill in which a number of self-appointed sergeant-majors are taking advantage of men's inability to put two and two together to make them form fours. Choose a Bright Morning is a deliriously joyous satire at the expense of Hitlerism. All the strutting pomposities and solemn crucities of Nazi Germany are parodled with an exquisite viciousness. Uncle Adolf is transformed into Aunt Sally in this laughter-making novel. The author, though, takes care to remind us in one of his rare serious moments that laughter, however loud.

will never shift the Hitlers of this world; they have no sense of humour. Heinrich Hauser in Once Your Enemy gives a picture of post-war Germany as a breeding-ground for dictators. His book is a record of an amazing number of violent experiences. The author left school in his early 'teens to become a naval cadet, but almost immediately became involved in the German civil war.

LEAGUE TANGLED IN PROCEDURE PROBLEM FOR

THE HAGUE

Geneva, Sept. 22.

The Credentials Committee of the League of Nations has decided to submit to the Hague Court the question of the rights of Ethiopians, as represented by Emperor Haile Sclassie, to representation at Geneval. But before the Committee's decision can be acted on, the full Assembly must consider the matter.

This in itself raises a new problem, namely, whether recourse to the Hague Court requires a unanimous or only a majority decision of the As-sembly. If a unanimous decision is necessary it is unlikely to materialise, for non-sanctionist countries, Austria, Hungary and Albania, would vote · Even when these tangles are unravelled another set will arrive, namely: Is Ethiopia to be suspended pending the Hague's decision?

New York, Sept. 22. Although little short of a miracle can shake the New York Giants out of the first position in the National League with the end of the seuson so near, baseball circles were stirred to-day by the results of engagements. New York lost twice to Philadelphia, taking an eleven to seven beating in the opening fixture and and six to two defeat in the closing game. Next Move Expected From Germany

BREACH WITH ITALY'S HEALED NOT LEAGUE

London, Sept. 22.

Prince Otto von Bismarck, German Charge d'Affaires in London, is proceeding to Berlin on Wednesday for conferences with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Herr von Ribbentrop on the question of German participation in the proposed conclave of Locarno Treaty signatories.

The fate of Europe's latest peace move is dependent on the decision of these men.

Meanwhile, additional details of London's note to Berlin on Friday last have been revealed. First, Great Britain proposed to receive guarantees of her own security instead of merely guaranteeing the safety of other Locarno signatories, as in the first pact; second, London suggests that the League of Nations Council should normally decide whether a signatory is victim of aggression, and if so, by whose hand.—United Press.

Geneva, Sept. 22. The Italian delegation to the International Broadcasting Conference has announced its intention of abandoning any further part in the work of the conference.
